ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Those who use this volume have every reason to be grateful to Dr. F. G. Emmison, who has given hundreds of hours over several years to the compilation in an entirely honorary capacity. The originals were calendared seventy years ago by the great scholar, R. C. Fowler (an Assistant Keeper, P.R.O.), and the balance by myself.

M.F.

Grateful thanks are due to Dr. Marc Fitch (apart from his editorial burden) for bearing the cost of printing, except for small but appreciated grants by the Friends of Historic Essex and Miss Anne Barker; also to Mr. Roy Stephens for dealing with various problems in seeing the book through the press.

INTRODUCTION

The property market

The present calendar reveals how the 'New Men' who had acquired Essex monastic lands at the Dissolution were creating larger estates. The Fines show Sir Richard Rich, Lord Rich, who bought Leighs Priory from the Crown, later becoming possessed of numerous manors in central and east Essex. Sir William Petre's gradual and extensive enlargement of his Ingatestone Hall estate is similarly evidenced.¹ Other big estates were built up by successful Crown officers. We see the purchases of many manors by Sir Anthony Browne, Chief Justice of Common Pleas, and Sir Thomas Mildmay, Auditor of the Court of Augmentations, and of several manors by Thomas Mildmay, Auditor of the same court, and of other manors by Thomas Fanshawe, an Exchequer official, and John Southcote, William Ayloffe, and Thomas Meade, all judges, who came to live in the county, the last also being active J.P.s. Among the lesser London luminaries, William Bendlowes, serjeant-in-law, by a long series of Fines acquired much property around his home (still surviving) at Place Farm, Great Bardfield.

Thus the Fines testify to a volatile property market, in which some purchases, like Sir William Cecil's, were apparently for investment only. Several magnates appear as purchasers or vendors or both. Robert Dudley, Earl of Leicester, bought the manor of Wanstead, which was to be his chief country residence, and a neighbouring manor, both in 1579. Two Fines in the following year (pp.234, 236) suggest his having sold them, but they were in fact mortgaged.² In 1578 an adjacent manor, Aldersbrook in Little Ilford and Wanstead, became the home of Henry Herbert, Earl of

INTRODUCTION

Pembroke, but only for two years, when he sold it. William Cecil, Lord Burghley, who never lived in Essex, purchased several manors in 1574-76; but his predecessor as Secretary of State, Sir Thomas Smyth, had confined himself to possessing the manor of Theydon Mount, on which he built, to his own advanced designs, the remarkable Hill Hall (now ruined by fire). The names of John Paulet, Marquis of Winchester, Francis Russell, Earl of Bedford, and Sir Nicholas Bacon occur occasionally; none apparently was resident in Essex. Thomas Sackville, Lord Buckhurst, is seen mostly as a vendor. Sir William Waldegrave of Smallbridge, just over the Suffolk border, purchased the manor of Stanstead Hall in Halstead in 1566; followed by a succession of sales, 1572-76, and finishing with Wormingford. The Fines disclose the loss in his last four years of the extensive estates of the ill-fated Walter Devereux, Earl of Essex, perhaps to defray the expenses of his Irish ventures.

Among the outstanding features, although known from other sources, is the dismemberment of virtually all the vast Essex estates of Edward de Vere, seventeenth Earl of Oxford. By 1580 he had lost twenty large and small properties. Contrary to the truth, there is the oft-repeated story that, when Burghley refused Oxford's request to save the Duke of Norfolk from execution (1572), he at once took the foolish revenge of dissipating his estates in order to ruin his wife Anne, Burghley's daughter. The account was completely disproved over seventy years ago by B. M. Ward, Oxford's biographer.³ He elicited from the unpublished Patent Rolls that the estates remained unaffected until four years later (1576), when selling started, as a result of his costly foreign travel and his loss through investing in Frobisher's voyages. In 1580 Oxford revived his father's company of actors; this and the heavy maintenance expenses led to further major sales extending throughout the year. The end of the present volume (Michaelmas term 1580) coincides with the last of this series, except for a manor on the Cambridge-Essex border. A resumption after nearly two years saw him divesting himself of almost all that remained of his lands. But Ward's refutation of the revenge allegation has apparently not been seen by several recent historians, who have maintained the false story.

The rise of yeomen to the ranks of the gentry is apparent from the numerous transactions. It is best studied more fully by including the evidence in the previous volume (ending in 1547), supplemented from that in the Fines for the rest of Elizabeth's time, which it is hoped may be published similarly within a few years as

INTRODUCTION

Volume VI of the series. One family on which much research has already been done is that of Fitch of north Essex.⁴ The earliest Fitch Fines (from 1523)⁵ in the present book indicate yeoman status. Although William Fitch had purchased the manor of Little Canfield in 1538, he was not accorded gentlemanly rank until 1540; after which the family gradually added to their properties for the rest of the Tudor period. Likewise William Beryff, who acquired half the manor of Bentons in Witham in 1553, was not recorded as 'gentleman' until his purchase of further property in the following year.

The evidence of Fines for manorial history

The record of Tudor Fines is a historian's happy hunting ground for the minor manors and late pseudo-manors in which Essex abounded. The present volume therefore supplements the two main printed sources, Morant's History of Essex (1768, reprint 1978) and Reaney's Place-Names of Essex (1935), for those parts of the county not yet covered by the Victoria History of Essex. A typical instance (p.5) is the sale in 1547 by Sir Anthony Hevenyngham of the manors of Flete Hall in Sutton and Barrow Hall in Eastwood. The Fine corrects Morant (i, p.292), who says that Flete Hall manor 'passed by Fine in 1557' and furnishes a useful reference to what is now Westbarrow Hall, not to be confused with the Domesday manor of Barn Hall in neighbouring Little Wakering. The manor of High Hall in Tolleshunt D'Arcy (p.212) does not occur in Morant, nor is the minute 'manor' of 'Le Lyon' or 'Red Lyon' in Hornchurch (pp.88, 113). Morant (ii, p.19) does not give manorial status to Seabrights in Great Baddow although he found the 'Hall' suffix under 1544; it is only 'a messuage' and lands in a Fine of 1547.

The Fines refer to some manors of earlier date than those cited in Place-Names of Essex. A few obscure manors, such as Mary Hall in Belchamp Walter (p.17), are not readily found in PNE, which gives it present name of St. Mary Hall with only a 13th-century source. The Fine of the 'manor' of Pyersyes in Halstead (pp.13, 36), quoted as the earliest reference in PNE, is found as a house called Perces in Morant. Of the manor of Bacons with Flories in Great Tey (pp.96, 106), Bacons finds no place in PNE and the site has

5. The family in fact occurs in Volume IV (very frequently) and in Volume III (1404).

INTRODUCTION

apparently not been located. The same remark applies to the little manor of Pounte alias Benets in Bulmer, to which the industrious Morant managed to find three references. Unlike the Fines (pp.26, 41), he rightly refused manorial status to the four houses of Paslowes, Imbers, Falconers and Bowers in Good Easter. Occasionally the attorney who gave the details to the court was in doubt: Stock Hall in Matching is termed 'the manor or messuage' (p.19) but a manor later (p.37); and Gayshams Hall, a sub-manor in the great lordship of Barking, appears as a messuage in the Fines, and it seems that a few other small estates, each recorded in the Fines as a messuage and lands, should have been termed manors.

The owership of a few manors had been subdivided into moieties and even moieties of moieties (i.e. a fourth part); of the latter, the manor of Otes in High Laver is a good example, supplementing Morant (i, p.140-1) with five Fines. Other fractions occur, e.g. two-thirds of Waltham Hall in Takeley (p.20), later unified (p.189). Extreme instances are one-seventh of a non-manorial estate (p.5) and of 4 acres (p.2), where it may be possible that the wife was one of seven daughters and co-heirs. Two such daughters joined with their husbands to sell two-fifths of what may be (p.13), although not so termed, the manor of Boons in Bocking (Morant, ii, p.387).

Obsolete forms of place-names, misleading or highly inaccurate spellings, and places which have finally evaded positive identification are discussed at the end of the Preface.

Manorial appurtenances

The important right to hold a market or fair, granted by the Crown, is associated with a few manors. The market and two annual fairs attached to the manor of Abells in Halstead were held by royal grant of 1467; two Fines (pp.126, 209) refer to them, the latter adding the term ferie (holy-days). Brentwood market and fairs went with the manor of South Weald (p.187). The transaction of 1580 regarding the manor of Fingrith Hall in Blackmore (p.238) includes the fair at Fingrith, which Morant linked with the manor of Blackmore Priory. A common appurtenance was the liberty of free warren or chase — the right to keep and hunt beasts of the chase (see Index of Subjects under 'warrens'). Fishery rights, not all manorial, were also fairly common (see Index), and a single 'free fishpond in Fobbing water' is mentioned (p.107). Most were freshwater fisheries. Coastal fishery rights appear as 'weirs', often spelt 'wares', and in other contemporary documents sometimes known as keddlers or kiddles, which were nets attached to permanent stakes.⁶ Weirs were recorded off the north bank of the Blackwater estuary (e.g. p.196, but 'without fishing rights'), off the south bank at Bradwell-juxta-Mare (p.96), where unusually it is called the 'Pounte' (Pant generally being reserved for the upper part of the river), and off 'Walleetts' (Wallasea island). Other coastal features include wharves, quays, a salthouse, and a fish-store, all at Harwich, a wharf at Stanford-le-Hope, and rent paid in salt from Stow Maries or Woodham Ferrers saltcotes.⁷ The Thames ferries were manorial, but not Fambridge ferry. The Fines add to our imperfect knowledge of the title to advowsons⁸ and also give a few details of tithes in some parishes.

INTRODUCTION

In medieval times the possession of a dovecote was restricted to lords of manors; some manors, e.g. Arnolds in Mountnessing (pp.148, 152, 221), had two. But by the Tudor period the law seems to have been much overlooked, as one sees many non-manorial dovecotes, even on a very small property (e.g. pp.56, 102). Of the few parks specifically mentioned, little is known of Ramsden (Bellhouse) Park apart from its being shown on Chapman and André's Map of Essex (1777).

To many properties was attached 'common of pasture', or grazing rights. These existed over areas ranging from village 'greens' to great heaths, especially those in east Essex, such as Tiptree Heath, and those around Colchester. Of middle-size commons one finds Farewood Common in Great Leighs (p.2) and Stock Common (p.182). Grazing rights are noted, e.g., for '2 horses, 2 cows and 30 sheep' at Hockley and Rawreth (p.30) and for 5 'animals' at Nazeing (p.64). Rights in the forest areas are exemplified by grazing for 100 sheep and feeding (pannage) for 12 pigs at Theydon Garnon and Mount (p.99). 'Faldage', the privilege attached to certain manors, obliged the tenants to set up folds in which their sheep manured the stubble after harvest. Such sheep-walks are found in six Fines, all relating to the chalk lands in north-west Essex – the area of the wide common (or open) fields, clearly shown on Chapman and André's Map of Essex (1777) – the highest figures being for 300 sheep (p.45) and for 600 sheep (p.96). Other large flocks of sheep fed on the coastal marshlands (p.12).

INTRODUCTION

Miscellaneous items

Among other valuable facts are the references to mills, a majority specifying whether water, wind, or fulling-mills.⁹ But where the Fine covers more than one parish, one cannot always identify the relevant parish. Most of the water-mills are those shown on Chapman's Map and on, or their sites on, modern maps. The location of windmills may correspond with those on the same map (1777), e.g. Canewdon (p.215), but some may have vanished, e.g. that in the manor of Prestons in South Hanningfield (p.152), before 1777. Of the few fulling-mills 'Walbury mill' in Great Hallingbury (p.79) was the predecessor of the 'silk mill' on Chapman, the frontispiece plate of which, showing a fulling-mill, is a source of perennial delight. Fines add to our otherwise imperfect knowledge of the title to advowsons,¹⁰ also some details of tithes in various parishes. Non-pecuniary rents (taken only in some cases) paid to certain manors comprise apples, fowls, cloves, cumin, wax, salt, cartloads of wood from Waltham Forest, two pairs of gilt spurs, and two red roses.

Description of property

In the method of recording the property, Fines differ greatly from Deeds (conveyances, mortgages, etc.). Whereas the latter may furnish much detail or virtually nothing beyond 'messuage and the appurtenant lands', the post-medieval Fines follow a standardised form employing a limited number of terms. The regular order, subject to slight variation, is as follows, the words italicised being commonest: messuage (dwelling house), toft (site of a former dwelling), cottage, curtilage (yard), barn, stable, garden, orchard, mill, dovecote; land (arable), meadow, pasture, wood, furze and heath (probably rough pasture), moor, fresh marsh, and salt marsh. A few additional words may occur: shop, kitchen (often a separate outhouse to reduce fire risk), and wharves, etc. (in coastal properties).

Acreages

A matter of some interest is the degree of accuracy of the acreages given in Fines. Two otherwise authoritative pamphlets about Deeds

9. Essex is fortunate in having two recent works of outstanding interest: H. Benham, Some Essex Windmills (1976) and K. G. Farries, Essex Windmills, Millers and Millwrights (1981-86).

INTRODUCTION

cast doubt. One avers that 'acreages are approximate only', the other that 'details of land are usually conventional, the acreages given are too large'.¹¹ Neither writer stated that he had based his generalisation on a detailed study of individual Fines. The present writer felt that the problem justified some research. The result¹² was based on collation of Fines with Deeds, where both relate to the same property. The article cites eighteen 16th- and 17th-century examples drawn from documents in the Essex Record Office. The conclusion is that the acreages and also the qualities (arable, wood, etc.) in the majority of Tudor Fines are fairly reliable, even where all figures end in '0'. It must suffice to quote only one passage. The two authors' dismissive comments about acreages undoubtedly arose from two facts: (1) many Fines, especially those for the bigger estates, give round figures, and (2) some seem at first sight to enumerate the qualities according to a sort of normal ratio as 30 a. land, 10 a. meadow, 20 a. pasture and 5 a. wood. Many farms of course had such proportions. But a short study would have shown (1) that numerous Fines give acreages not ending in noughts, and (2) that the quasi-standard ratios have plenty of exceptions. That round figures appear in Fines of big estates is only natural, as few pre-1700 descriptive surveys and large-scale maps were available; and area estimates were often made also in Deeds.¹³ If the recent article has established reliability, the corollary follows that, where the Fine is the sole known record of a property transaction, its topographical facts are valuable to the local historian. Indeed, as the article exemplifies, it is not uncommon for a Fine to contain more detail than its related feoffment or similar conveyance. One should however emphasise that Fines dealing with very large properties, especially those in the 'Divers Counties' series covering many counties (unlike those of average-size properties on the borders of two counties, e.g. p.51), express only roughly estimated acreages.

Types of Fines

The curious terminology used in Fines needs some explanation. What is their effect on the parties' title to the property? They were resorted to for various reasons, the chief being to render the title more secure by their being recorded in the Court of Common Pleas. A Fine barred the wife's right of dower. A few were linked with marriage settlements. The 'use', or title resulting from the Fine, cannot be definitely deduced; even in the simplest form of Fine the deforciant and the plaintiff are not necessarily, though nearly always, the vendor and the purchaser respectively. The intended effect was often ensured by a 'Deed to lead the uses of a Fine' or a 'Deed to declare the uses', made before or after the Fine was 'levied'; such a document frequently being found in company with a Final Concord in a bundle of deeds.

INTRODUCTION

In the absence of such an explanatory document, one must study the language of the record itself. Our Fines, unlike those of earlier date, belong to relatively few types. The best description is found in the 'formulary' section of the late C. A. F. Meekings' introduction to Tudor Fines.¹⁴ A brief summary follows.

1. Plaintiff secures his title from deforciant. (The normal type.)
2. Plaintiff secures the reversion to the property on the death of deforciant(s), who is/are the life tenant(s); the latter may be the deforciant's wife (e.g. p.22, no. 7, p.23, no. 26), his mother-in-law (p.2, no. 13), etc., or plaintiff secures the reversion at end of lessee's term (p.4, no. 45.)
3. Plaintiff 'renders back' to deforciant(s) for his/their life/lives, with remainder(s) to named person(s) (e.g. p.21, no. 2, heir apparent, p.12, no. 19, p.13, no. 32, or husband, p.25, nos. 73, 74).
4. Plaintiff renders back to deforciant(s) in fee simple (e.g. p.21, no. 91, p.27, no. 30).
5. Plaintiff renders back to deforciant(s) in fee tail (e.g. p.2, no. 25, p.4, no. 50, p.5, no. 80, p.16, no. 21).

A few other versions are found (e.g. p.2, no. 23, p.19, no. 63), some being too complicated for discussion in this Preface.

Family history

In a period for which the earliest parish register is not uncommonly lost, Fines are a useful secondary source for a wife's christian, though not maiden, name. Relationships are sometimes given, e.g. p.1, no. 2, p.2, no. 5, or suggested, e.g. p.2, no. 21.

INTRODUCTION

Spellings

A number of unusual place-names occur, in particular, Thambridge (for Fambridge), Gooster (Good Easter), Standishe (Stambridge), Chestover (Chesterford), Aldorney (Althorne), and Ravensden Bellows (Ramsden Bellhouse). Such spellings are certainly errors of the court scribes. Essex readers may be surprised to find that the distinctive prefixes or suffixes to some parish names differed from those in later and modern use. Examples are Chignall Trenchfoyle (now Chignall Smealy), Tey Godmer (now Little), and Roothing Masy (now Margaret). The 'Ginge' or 'Inge' group of parishes in central Essex were known in medieval and Tudor times as Ing Berners or Ing Hospital (for Fryerning), (G)yng Margaret, Gyng Mountney, 'Gyngraff', rightly Gyng Ralph (Ingrave), and Ging ad petram (probably so-called from the milestone on the Roman road to Colchester, still preserved at Ingatestone cross-roads), and the prizewinner (G)ing Joyberd Laundry, named after two twelfth-century tenants (the alternative of Buttsbury).¹⁵ In other cases forms which might be misleading (e.g. 'Bures', for Bowers Gifford, not Bures in north Essex) have been correctly indexed. Identification is a time-consuming task. In the end the following place-names still remain elusive, though their approximate location is generally deducible: Austeyns, Bustes, Crawlese, Duxworth, Gyps, Hamptons, Horewood, Leylofte Hall, Stulpes, Tolkelones and Wrestes. Suggestions are invited.

Since this Introduction was written several years ago, much new material for 16th-century social history and Essex local and family history is in 5,000 detailed abstracts in Essex Wills, 1558-1603, vols. 1-5 (1982-89) and Elizabethan Life, vols. 1-5 (1970-80), all edited by F. G. Emmison, obtainable from E.R.O., County Hall, Chelmsford; another 7,000 wills abstracts have been made for vols. 6-12 (1991-97?).

INDEX OF PLACES

Editorial notes. (1) To help readers identify the parishes in which many strange names of manors occur, these have been cross-referenced in their Calendar forms to their respective parishes. (2) Only major variants in spelling are noted. (3) Names of messuages and streets (but not fields) are indexed. (4) The modern forms of parishes and hamlets are used. (5) Non-Essex parishes/manors are indexed only under their counties. (6) Where more than one reference appears on a page, it is denoted by '(2)', etc. (7) 'm' denotes manor, 'adv.' denotes advowson. See also Abbreviations at head of Text.
